

ProfessorClock Media Announces Its Fall 2026 Expansion

A direct-to-reader storefront, the first edition of P.M.S. — Parallax Morph Syndrome, and the return of The Prose Portal

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Independent publisher and transmedia studio ProfessorClock Media today announced three literary initiatives for Fall 2026: an independent storefront, a first-edition book pre-order now open, and the return of its weekly live writing room.

Direct-to-Reader Storefront

professorclockbooks.com is now live — an independent literary portal carrying collector-grade physical editions and digital volumes across the company's sixteen-year Afrofuturist catalog, sold directly to readers rather than through an intermediary.

First Edition Pre-Order — Open Now

Pre-orders are open now for P.M.S. — Parallax Morph Syndrome, the speculative psychological thriller by author and creative director D. L. Robinson (Damien Lamar Robinson), exploring fragmented timelines, cognitive dissonance, and memory architecture. The first edition is a hardcover with the ebook included at $29.99, shipping on release day, October 9, 2026. Chapter One is sent by email to every reader who orders, and is not published anywhere else.

The Prose Portal Returns

Its next cohort opens Sunday, September 13, 2026 at 4:00 PM ET. proseportal.com runs free weekly 90-minute live writing sprints alongside the twelve-week Conquered Chambers craft masterclasses, with a direct publishing pipeline into Time Traveler's Digest anthologies.

"We are creating a closed-loop creative ecosystem. From live weekly writing sprints inside The Prose Portal to direct-to-reader publishing on ProfessorClock Books, we are equipping writers and readers with sovereign, human-led storytelling."

— D. L. Robinson, Founder & Creative Director, ProfessorClock Media
